

It is thoroughly time to reopen the DC area's general aviation airports to transient pilots and pilot training. We all know that there is no real security threat from small personal aircraft. I strongly feel that the new Pilot ID requirements plus the existing TFR's do more than enough to insure proper identity and responsibility in the sky. Stop destroying the commerce of general aviation in the Washington, DC area.